RE: Tanzania Times Article released online March 3, 2022 “Rarest and Largest of Black Rhino Species Discovered Hiding Within Nyerere National Park”.

The Grumeti Fund is a non-profit organization carrying out wildlife conservation and community development work in the western corridor of the Serengeti ecosystem in Tanzania. Our vision is a world in which people and wildlife live together sustainably, forever.

The article released by the Tanzania Times does not reflect the views or opinions of the Grumeti Fund.

The Grumeti Fund would like to inform all of our donors, partners and members of the public that we do not agree with the content of this article. We furthermore do not believe the facts to be true.

The cover photo used in the article of the two Eastern Black Rhinoceros was not provided to the Tanzania Times by Grumeti Fund or any of its employees.

The Government of Tanzania, under the Ministry of Natural Resources and Tourism, continue to be the only government authority to make announcements and decisions on the Rhinoceros population in Tanzania.

We regret any inconvenience this article may have caused.
